PROJECT OVERVIEW

Coffee Company Hada operates as a specialty coffee boutique brand positioned between artisan craftsmanship and scalable premium retail. The company offers premium coffee beans, retail coffee packs, and brewing equipment while cultivating a strong brand identity centred on design, culture, and the ritual of coffee consumption. Unlike traditional coffee brands that compete primarily on price or convenience, Coffee Company Hada differentiates itself through a design-led and culture-driven approach that integrates coffee with broader creative disciplines such as art, music, and literature. This positioning allows the brand to build a deeper emotional connection with its audience and establish itself as more than simply a coffee retailer.

The company currently distributes its products through a hybrid model that includes Direct-to-Consumer e-commerce via Shopify, café partnerships, selective wholesale distribution, and collaboration-based cultural events. This multi-channel approach allows the brand to maintain strong visibility within the specialty coffee community while gradually expanding its commercial reach.

CORE CHALLENGE

The core issue therefore lies in the gap between brand affinity and purchasing behaviour. Customers recognise and appreciate the brand, but conversion rates and repeat purchase behaviour remain limited. In addition, the company must determine how to scale its business while maintaining the cultural depth that differentiates it from traditional specialty coffee brands. As a result, the business must prioritise the most effective growth channels and identify strategies that maximise impact with limited resources.

This consultancy project therefore focuses on identifying opportunities to improve online conversion performance and customer retention through a structured Direct-to-Consumer growth strategy.

CONSULTANCY DELIVERABLES

To address the challenges identified in the client briefing, this consultancy project will deliver several key strategic outcomes designed to strengthen the company's Direct-to-Consumer performance and support long-term growth.

- Market and Competitor Analysis

The project will begin with an analysis of the specialty coffee market and the competitive landscape. This will involve examining how leading specialty coffee brands successfully convert brand engagement into online sales, with particular focus on their Direct-to-Consumer strategies, digital marketing approaches, and customer retention models.

- Direct-to-Consumer Growth Strategy

Based on the insights gathered from market research and customer journey analysis, this strategy will focus on improving conversion rates, optimising the digital sales funnel, and strengthening the overall effectiveness of the company's online commerce platform.

- Customer Retention and Repeat Purchase Strategy

Increasing repeat purchasing behaviour is essential for improving customer lifetime value and stabilising revenue growth. The consultancy will therefore explore initiatives such as coffee subscription services, bundled product offerings, and loyalty programmes that encourage customers to make recurring purchases.

- Strategic Recommendations and Implementation Guidance

The final stage of the project will provide actionable recommendations designed to help Coffee Company Hada translate its strong brand identity into sustainable commercial performance. These recommendations will prioritise initiatives that maximise impact while remaining feasible for a boutique brand with limited resources.
